GIMP GIMP, short for GNU Image Manipulation Program, is an open source Photoshop alternative that is available for both Windows and Linux. Like Photoshop, GIMP's tasks are many and varied — image editing, web page design, and the like — and it comes with many tools. GIMP also boasts a large and vibrant online community. GIMP is a fine choice for beginning photographers. It offers many of the features found in Photoshop and Photomerge, a special blend of image editing and manipulation tools that takes a bit of getting used to. However, if you're a seasoned Photoshop user, GIMP can't give you the interactive editing features that you would find in a true Photoshop alternative. ## Equipment Whether you're a beginner or intermediate photographer, you'll need a few tools and a few things to store your photos. You can probably get away with the same basic equipment for most things, but your type of photography may dictate what you need. If you take a lot of pictures of people, your editing may take different approaches than if you take photographs of landscapes. Sometimes it helps to have some basic gear that you can point at something and pull the trigger. Digital Camera The key component in any photographic image is the camera. You may not have bought it yet, but you'll be having it for years to come. It's the most important purchase you'll make as a photographer. Get the camera you'll be comfortable with and that fits in your budget. It needs to meet the following requirements:

- Provide the kind of quality that you're comfortable with
- Have good ergonomics that make it easy to use
- Be large enough to hold a good deal of your digital images
- Have a fast processor that is capable of handling multiple images
- Have a large enough memory to hold the images that you take
- Have a good viewfinder with a clear image of the subject
- Have the right features and controls for the type of photography that you shoot

And, of course, the camera can't be too heavy. As you research camera models to buy, keep a few important criteria in

Q: What is the best way to log all messages to a file using log4j for both production and testing I'm using log4j for logging, and want all messages to go to one file. What is the best way to do this for both testing and production? I'm thinking of adding a debug feature that will output the messages to stdout, and then redirect them to the log file. I'm thinking of using log4j.properties in each build type with the following: # log4j configuration file # Direct log messages to the console

log4j.rootCategory=WARN, console # Redirect the log output
```

log4j.appender.console=org.apache.log4j.ConsoleAppender
```

log4j.appender.console.target=System.err # Redirect log output to a file
```

```

log4j.appender.file.layout=org.apache.log4j.PatternLayout

log4j.appender.file.layout.conversionPattern=%d{dd/MM/yyyy HH:mm:ss:SSS} %p [%c] - %m%n

Is this a good option, or do I need to make some significant changes? A: Here is the best way I have found that I have used in the past: package com.myproj.logs; import org.apache.log4j.Level; import org.apache.log4j.Logger; import org.apache.log4j.PatternLayout; public class CommonLog { private static final Logger log = Logger.getLogger(CommonLog.class); private CommonLog() { } public static void setLogFileLocation() throws java.io.IOException { log.info("Log file location has been set to: " + System.getProperty("user.dir") + File.pathSeparator + "/logs/logs.log"); } public static void setLogLevel(Level level) { log.setLevel(level); }
